Justice Barrett holds that the evidence of the marriage and the improper conduct of the defendant are insufficient.

The decision leaves Isenbrandt in doubt as to whether he is married or not.

On Easter Sunday, 1885, Isenbrandt went to College Point with a woman known as Emms and Belia. He drank during the day, and in the evening his companion told him they had been married. Isenbrandt had no recollection of the marriage, but as the womain persisted, they lived together for over a year and a half as man and wife.

In September, 1886, Emma left Isenbrandt, he says, with another man, and he has not seen her since.
